Will Prosecute Duck Hunters.

A dispatch sent out from Washington clears up the point of whether or not the government will prosecute duck hunting. This is worthy of perusal of every lover of ducks and is printed below:

From the number of letters which they have received on the subject recently, officials of the department of Agriculture believe that sportsmen may unintentionally violate the provisions of the federal migratory bird law which the government will enforce rigidly. Under the provisions of this law no water fowl can be shot in the northern or breeding zone after January 15, except in New Jersey, where the season extends to February 1, but extends to 15 in Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina. These regulations were proclaimed on October 1, 1913. No change has since been made in them, and no change is likely to be made until the constitutionality of the law has been passed on by the United States supreme court. As a matter of fact, the law provides that all changes in the regulations must be considered for a period of 90 days, and then must be approved and signed by the president before they become effective. It is thus evident that there is no possibility that the prohibition of spring shooting will be in any modified this year. The officials of the department who are intrusted with the enforcement of the law want these facts impressed upon the people because it is the intention to investigate carefully all all reports of violations made to the department's inspectors and wardens and to prosecute all such violations in the federal courts. In this connection it is pointed out that prosecutions may be instituted at any time within three years of the offence.

Social Affairs

The old Sewing Club which was organized among the young women of the city a year ago for social purposes has been resurrected and had its first session of the season Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Leannah Minter. Social affairs have been rather scarce here this winter and last week witnessed about the first events of the entire season. As spring opens up and things look a little brighter business in the social line also seems to be picking up.

Pipe Line Changes Name

The Prairie Oil & Gas company is no more. It is now known as the Prairie Pipe Line company. The new company is capitalized at $27,000,000, and the filing fee required in each state amounted to about $750. It is an expensive luxury, changing the name of a big corporation but sometimes it is as essential as a new hat. The change will not affect the management of the local pumping station; or, for that matter, will it affect the company in any way.

For some time there have been rumors to the effect that the company would take up all of mains running through this section of the country and put them down in cement. This story grew out of the fact that the pipe line is in some places badly pitted on account of the alkali, and repair work is constantly going on. Below Carrollton large gangs of men numbering several hundred are at work putting down an emergency line that will extend to Wood River, Ill. Another line is being built between Buckner and Carrollton.
